Justice + Joy National Collaborative Survey

At Justice + Joy National Collaborative, we believe that young people of color deserve to have their voices heard—especially when it comes to policies that directly impact their lives. That's why we are launching a national study on sexual and reproductive health access among young people. This survey is specifically designed for girls, young women, and gender-expansive young people of color (ages 12-26) in the U.S. It will provide critical insights into how they access sexual and reproductive health care, the challenges they face, and their perspectives on issues like abortion rights. Their voices matter, and their participation will help drive meaningful change. For any questions, you may also contact Erykah Weems at erykah@justiceandjoynatl.org with the subject line: RJ Survey Code.

Fertility, Identity, and Reproductive Health for Students and Trainees (FIRST)

You are invited to participate in an IRB approved research study titled “The FIRST Project” by researchers at NYU Langone Health in the NYU Langone Fertility Center. This research study will be a program evaluation of the Fertility, Identity, and Reproductive Health for Students and Trainees (FIRST) course. The FIRST course was designed to be an interactive, accessible online learning experience for medical students and trainees to further understand reproductive wellness and to improve confidence in making reproductive life planning decisions that align with their career goals. Your participation will help us evaluate the efficacy and learning experience of the FIRST course, and to make improvements or changes where indicated to strengthen the material for future learners.

Participation in this study is voluntary, anonymous, and there are no incentives for participation. Those who decide to participate will be asked to complete a pre-survey before completing the FIRST course and then asked to complete a post survey after their completion of the course.

Please feel free to email the principal investigator of this study, Dr. Jennifer Blakemore at Jennifer.Blakemore@nyulangone.org, if you have any questions about this study.

By clicking the following link <https://learnfirst.thinkific.com/courses/FIRST> you will be taken to the course home page. If you choose to participate in the program evaluation, please review the consent at the beginning of the course after registering. Once you have reviewed the consent, you may click next to participate in the pre-evaluation, and then may continue on to the course. Please note that you will have to create an account to participate.
